A crab becomes a soft shell when it goes through a molting phase. This means the crab is forming a new larger soft shell under its hard shell. The crab then sheds the hard shell and becomes a soft shell. Crabs only stay a soft shell for a few hours which make it more difficult to catch soft shells.

Soft Shell Crabs - (WHALE)

One day Crab is walking along the beach when Whale becomes beached on the shore. Whale starts to worry and panic but Crab kindly helps Whale to keep calm by teaching her to breathe gently like the sound of the sea. As they drift off to sleep the tide starts to rise around them and the next day Whale is able to swim off once again.
