In modern TVs, the firmware is updated via the USB interface. In older models, this is done using the programmer via the SPI interface (for FLASH), or via the I2C bus (for EEPROM). The DUMP LG 32LF510U-ZB LD55B EAX66453203 (1.0) is used for many purposes. One of the main advantages of installing DUMP is that you can repair a dead tv.

One debugging feature I have been keen to add is the ability to see the EEPROM memory. This will aid the debugging of the code on the STM8S as it will be easier to see the data being consumed by the application running on the remote control. The EEPROM memory dump feature simply displays a grid of memory locations along with the contents.
